Aon announces decision to outsource superannuation administration services to Pillar.

Outsourcing services to Pillar sees Aon leverage off Pillar's scale, advanced technology platforms and specialised experience.

SYDNEY, 7 February 2008. Aon Australia has announced its decision to outsource its superannuation administration services to the specialised provider – Pillar Administration.

Aon's Consulting's Managing Director, Stewart Fotheringham, said that the partnership is a positive move for Aon and its clients, as it looks to leverage off Pillar's scale, technology platforms and specialised experience to continue to provide clients with excellent superannuation administration services in this increasingly complex and competitive industry."

"This move also underpins our continuing development of innovative and quality superannuation solutions through the Aon Master Trust, as seen in our market-leading product developments such as minimum level default insurance cover, Fotheringham said.

Pillar's Chairman, Dr Col Gellatly, commented "We are excited about being appointed to administer Aon's superannuation business, and we're looking forward to a long and rewarding relationship. Aon's decision again confirms Pillar as a leading provider of superannuation administration services in Australia and it's a great start to 2008. We are delighted to be working with an acknowledged industry leader with an impressive client list and adviser network."
